Quality of Life Bone Marrow Transplant Survivors

Dear Colleague:

Enclosed is the information you requested regarding our Quality of Life in Bone Marrow Transplant Survivors tools. This instrument has been derived from research in quality of life (QOL) conducted since 1983 by the investigators at the City of Hope National Medical Center, Duarte, CA. It is adapted to our bone marrow transplant (BMT) population in 1989. The instrument is based on our conceptualization of quality of life which includes the four domains of physical well being, psychological well being, social concerns, and spiritual well being.

The instrument has two components. The first component consists of 20 forced-choice and open-ended items that relate to patient demographics and other patient characteristics. The second component contains 64 QOL items using 10-point scales. We have found it helpful to conduct QOL evaluation before transplant and at various points of time post-transplant.

The quality of life items are divided into the four domains or subscales conceptualized by our QOL model. Following is the list of items identified by subscale.

- Physical well being: Items 21 through 38.
- Psychological well being: Items 39 through 61.
- Social concerns: Items 62 through 74.
- Spiritual well-being: Items 75 through 82.

The last item (Items 38, 61, 74, and 82) in each of the domains asks the patient to rate his overall well being for that domain or subscale. These items are used in calculating a subscale score.

Item 83 asks the patient whether or not he would recommend a BMT to a family member or close friend with the same illness. We have found this item useful in identifying whether or not the patient would undergo another BMT.

Item 84 provides information as to whether or not the patient found that completing the tool was useful.

The instrument was developed specifically for QOL as it relates to BMT and was tested from 1990 through 1992 at the City of Hope National Medical Center. Psychometric analysis of the first version revealed content validity .90, test-retest reliability ($r = .71$, $p = .001$), total score internal consistency ($r = .85$, $p = .01$), subscale alphas of $r = .40$ to $r = .86$, and evaluation by multiple regression analysis, factor analysis, and item correlations. Complete discussion of the psychometrics is provided in the first reference of the attached bibliography.

The current version of the tool (also attached) was developed based on the results of two studies ($N = 212$ and $N = 174$). Analysis of this data is still in progress.

Also attached is a bibliography of our QOL research publications which includes citations specific to this BMT population. The fifth publication cited in the bibliography is attached for your convenience.

You are welcome to use our instrument. We require no further request for permission. Please use the instrument as prepared and acknowledge it as Quality of Life in Bone Marrow Transplant Survivors, City of Hope National Medical Center (Grant, Ferrell, Rivera, Molina, and Forman).

Scoring: It is important when coding the 10-point items that all items be coded to reflect 0 = worst outcome/negative QOL to 10 = best outcome/positive QOL. Many of the items are scored in the reverse. The following items need to be reverse coded prior to data entry or your results will be inaccurate.

- Items 21 through 37; 39, 50 through 60; 62 through 64, 67 through 70; 72; 73; and 75

Subscale scores are produced by adding the scores on each item within the subscale and then dividing the number of items in that subscale. (This calculation does not include the last item in each subscale [Items 38, 61, 74, and 82], nor items 83 and 84.) A total QOL score is obtained by adding the scores of items 21 through 37, 39 through 60, 62 through 73, and 75 through 81 and then dividing by 58.

Each 10-point QOL item has a NA (not applicable) option. Score each NA item yes or no and separate from the 10-point scale. Thus, each QOL item is scored in two ways: 1) from 0 to 10 and 2) NA - yes or no.

We hope that our Quality of Life in Bone Marrow Transplant Survivors tool is useful to your research.
